Attribution of “Internet + Logistics” Drug-Related Behavior from the Perspective of Law and Benefit

GENG Jianfu ZHOU Jianjun

Abstract: How to determine whether “Internet + logistics” drug-related acts are drug-related crimes or other crimes is constantly evolving with the enrichment of judicial practice. The legal benefit of drug crime protection is the fundamental to clarify whether “Internet + logistics” drug-related acts are drug crimes or other crimes. The reason why drugs are called drugs is that the core is the states control, and the state’s control is based on the characteristics of the drug itself. The legal form of protection against drug crimes is the states control system for drugs, and the essence is to prevent the harm caused by drug abuse to society. “Internet + logistics” drug crimes have expanded the scale of legal benefits harmed by drug crimes, and the premise of legal protection is reasonable. To determine whether “Internet + logistics” drug-related behavior is a drug crime or another crime, we should adhere to the dichotomy model of formal law benefiting into crime and substantive law benefiting crime. In the attribution of responsibility for drug-related behaviors of “Internet + logistics” enterprises, the “industry rules” standard should be adhered to, and the drug control responsibility of enterprises should not be arbitrarily expanded.
